

COOKIE USAGE POLICY

1. What are cookies?

Cookies are small text files which are placed on a personal computer or mobile phone by the websites that are visited. These text files can be read by the visited websites and can help identify the users when the same site is visited again.

These text files can be “permanent” or “temporary”. Permanent cookies remain on the personal computer even once the browser has been closed (switched to offline mode), while temporary cookies are deleted once the browser is closed. Cookies are used for multiple purposes, such as remembering users’ activities and preferences (logins, language preferences, font size, or page display), providing personalized/adapted website content and displaying its browsing history.

2. Why are cookies used?

The Company’s website uses cookies for the following purposes:

- for technical functionality of the website;
- for collection of aggregate and anonymous statistical data;
- to remember users’ page loading preferences (display settings preferences), such as color contrast or font size;
- to remember whether you consent (or not) to our use of cookies on this website.

When you visit the Company’s website, third-party service Google Analytics is used in order to collect standard information regarding access and details about user behavior, but in a way that does not permit anyone to be identified, nor is it possible for Google to reveal the identity of those who have visited our site.

3. What type of cookies are used?

The insurance company uses permanent cookies, which remember the search history/session once the browser is closed in order to retain the user’s condition.

4. Can cookies be deleted or controlled?

Information related to cookies is not used for personal identification. Accepting cookies is not necessary for use of the website, however it would allow for a better experience while browsing.

These cookies can be deleted or blocked if the same is done with certain features on the Company's website.

It is possible to delete all cookies already placed on a personal computer, and to disable them on most search engines. If the former is done, it may be necessary to manually adjust your preferences each time you visit the website, and some services and functionalities may be disabled as well.

5. Changes to the Cookie Policy

The Cookie Usage Policy will be updated and supplemented regularly according to the occurring changes and activities of the Company.

6. Posting the Cookie Policy

This Cookie Usage Policy will be posted to the Company's official website.
